Understanding patients with Alzheimer’s, Anxiety and Autism can transform the careers of dental professionals. The rates of diagnosis of all three of these conditions continues to increase, so the likelihood that these patients will seek dental care in a private practice is greater than ever.

This course reviews the science and definitions of these medical challenges while exploring techniques to guide dental professionals and patients through a successful dental appointment. Learnings include patient assessment, behavior guidance and treatment techniques which include implementable technologies. Examples of homecare regimens for caretakers, as well as specific guidelines for practitioners will help you incorporate these patients into your practice, enhancing your clinical abilities while enriching your career.

Course Objectives
- Generate a basic understanding of Alzheimer’s, Anxiety and Autism Spectrum Disorder
- Implement new techniques for proper patient assessment
- Establish treatment procedures including creativity and the latest technology
- Create comprehensive home care guidelines for patients and their caretakers
- Develop behavior guidance protocol to help integrate these patients into the dental practice

Karen does a fabulous job of helping you to relate to your patients. I saw patients in a different light after her CE. I was more patient, more empathetic and so much more aware. Karen’s presentation is vulnerable and real. I am so looking forward to seeing here in Chico!
